PUCO to resume probes into FirstEnergy

By Larry Limpf
News Editor
news@presspublications.com

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio has ordered its four investigations related to FirstEnergy and House Bill 6 to resume.

The cases have been stayed since Aug. 24, 2022, at the request of the U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Ohio while a federal case was pending. The request letter stated that a trial for two persons involved in the $61 million corruption case, Larry Householder, former Republican Speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives, and Matt Borges, a lobbyist, was scheduled to start in January 2023 and the PUCO probe could impede with the federal case.

Household and Borges have since been convicted.

The stay expired on Feb. 23, of this year.

"We remain committed to protecting the interests of Ohio's consumers," said PUCO chairperson Jenifer French. "The PUCO will continue to follow the facts wherever they may lead."

A PUCO administrative law judge will issue an entry in the coming days to establish hearing dates for the proceedings, she said, including a due date for the ongoing audit of the utility's rates related to political and charitable expenses.

On Sep. 15, 2020, the PUCO opened a proceeding to review whether the political and charitable spending by Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company, Ohio Edison, and Toledo Edison in support of HB 6 and a subsequent referendum effort was included, directly or indirectly, in any rates or charges paid by customers.

On March 9, 2022, the PUCO ordered a third-party auditor to examine political and charitable expenses that may have been included in utility rates.

On Nov. 4, 2020, the PUCO initiated an audit of FirstEnergy Corp.'s compliance with Ohio's corporate sepa-

3 counties studying area's water/sewer capacity

By Larry Limpf
News Editor
news@presspublications.com

If a major tech company showed interest in locating in Northwest Ohio would the area have sufficient water and sewer service capacity to meet the needs of a large facility that uses millions of gallons daily?

A proposed study will attempt to answer that question.

"JobsOhio has been searching for sites for larger development that would include tech-related projects. Anything from data centers to possibly chip plants and computers. Intel is in the process of building a big plant near Columbus," said Kelly Frey, Ottawa County sanitary engineer. "The overall goal is to be prepared for future economic development opportunities as they arise. This study is the first step."

If the study proceeds, Frey's office will be collaborating with the sanitary engineering department of Lucas County and the Northwestern Water and Sewer District, which serves most of Wood County.

"Those three entities are working with the City of Toledo to look at potential sites for larger manufacturing/technical campuses," Frey said. "The study we're involved with as a county is to look at all the supporting communities and see what availability they have for water and sewer and add that to what is available through Toledo. Then,

The goal, as a group, is to share economic development opportunities with everyone and create a unified approach to this.

from an engineering standpoint, look to see how that would serve the area in southern Lucas County, eastern Wood County, and western Ottawa County.

"I don't think the study is looking at building anything as far as treatment. But the idea is to try and take advantage of the availability of capacity for different areas."

A computer chip plant could typically use 20 million gallons a day of water and maybe 15 million gallons a day of wastewater.

"That is really more than anybody has available now, with the exception of Toledo. With the study we're trying to determine what would be available to use for a facility of that nature. We'd like to get the study done in about six months," he said. "Right now we're just trying to get an understanding of what utilities are out there and what is available. Then we'll consolidate that into a report so if someone comes to the area we can show them what is available and how it would be provided."

Frey believes some area communities could benefit by participating in a development and providing water/sewer service due to economies of scale. For example, the Village of Genoa could lower its water costs.

"That's the hope for everybody, to lower the costs. If you look at the Village of Genoa and what its capabilities from a water and sewer standpoint are, which will be included in this study, there is a chance for them to capitalize on what is being done," Frey said. "The goal, as a group, is to share economic development opportunities with everyone and create a unified approach to this."

During a visit to Northwest Ohio in January, Gov. Mike DeWine said he was optimistic about the region's economic development potential.

eration laws and rules, which are designed to ensure that no undue preference or competitive advantage is provided to an affiliate by an electric distribution utility. The audit is to include an examination of the time period leading up to the passage of HB 6 and the subsequent ballot referendum.

According to court documents, from March 2017 to March 2020, millions of dollars were funneled to Householder and others in exchange for their help in passing HB 6.

The defendants then also allegedly worked to ensure the bill went into effect by helping to defeat a ballot initiative that would have given voters a chance to overturn the legislation.

Packer Creek improvement plan petitioned*“

If the improvement is approved and constructed, all costs of engineering, constructing, and future maintenance will be assessed to the benefiting parcels of land.

Residents in the Packer Creek watershed in Wood, Ottawa, and Sandusky counties will have an opportunity this week to view the scope of a proposed improvement project for the creek.

Notices have been sent to landowners in the watershed advising them they can view an engineering report on the project March 7 at 10 a.m. at the meeting room of the Wood County commissioners on the fifth floor of the county office building in Bowling Green.

The first hearing on the project is scheduled for April 16 at 10 a.m. at the same location.

A petition for the clean-up project was filed with the Wood County Board of Commissioners.

Within 21 days of the viewing landowners may file an amendment to the petition that expands the length of the pro-

"If the improvement is approved and constructed, all costs of engineering, constructing, and future maintenance will be assessed to the benefiting parcels of land," the notices say.

The main channel of the watershed begins at a catch basin on the south side of Sugar Ridge Road, approximately 2,000 feet west of Mercer Road. It proceeds to the northeast to the intersection of Fostoria Road and State Rt. 163 and follows through to the Village of Genoa and then to State Rt. 590.

Maps of the location of the proposed improvement were included with the mailed notices.

Levy estimator available

Wood County Auditor Matthew Oestreich said the levy estimator on the auditor's website is updated for the March 19, 2024 ballot. The website is located at <https://auditor.co.wood.oh.us>.

"The levy estimator is a valuable tool to inform voters of the impact on their taxes of upcoming levies," he said.

To use the estimator, property owners can search on the website for their specific parcel and then click on the levy estimator button. Users can then view the current tax amount on their parcel generated by each levy, the new tax amount if passed, and the difference based on the current year tax value. The website also lists the authority proposing the levy, the use of the levy, the type of levy (renewal, replacement, bond, etc.), the proposed mills, and the number of years the proposed levy will remain in effect. Auditor Oestreich stresses that "the parcel-specific information provided by the levy estimator will help voters make informed decisions."

There are three individual property tax levies on the March 19, ballot: Way Library, Anthony Wayne schools, and Perrysburg schools.

For information on polling locations and early or absentee voting, visit the Board of Elections website at <https://www.co.wood.oh.us/BOE/>. For questions regarding the levy estimator or the auditor's website, contact the Wood County Auditor's Office at 419-354-9150 or auditor@woodcountyohio.gov.

Toledo Helps Ukraine continuing work

As the war on Ukraine marked the two-year anniversary last month, Toledo Helps Ukraine continues its lifesaving work.

"The war in Ukraine is always front and center for Toledo Helps Ukraine," said Alona Matchenko, president and co-founder of the nonprofit. Matchenko, who was born and raised in Ukraine and recently earned her law degree from the University of Toledo, said she begins each morning by checking on her family in Ukraine, confirming that they are all alive.

"Unfortunately, as the war continues, it often becomes a footnote in the news," she said. "Yet every day, the people of Ukraine are dealing with devastating attacks on homes, schools, hospitals and civilians. Their needs are great and that is why we continue our work."

"Every day is consumed with meetings, plans, and work to assist Ukrainian citizens impacted by Russia's invasion of Ukraine," said Matchenko, who launched Toledo Helps Ukraine within days of the invasion. "Our goal is to raise awareness and funds, and to distribute them in a manner that will make the most significant impact on the lives of displaced or besieged Ukrainians."

Matchenko said Toledo Helps Ukraine, through the Uniting for Ukraine initiative, has relocated 65 individuals (18 families) from war-torn Ukraine, primarily in the Northwest Ohio area.

"We try to be a face in the community as often as possible, whether it is speaking to community groups or sponsoring special events and fundraisers. To date, Toledo Helps Ukraine has raised more than $90,000 and shipped thousands of pounds of humanitarian aid, including food, water, medicine, flashlights, generators and other items directly to the Ukrainian people," she said. "Every time we are in front of people, we are a reminder that the war continues, and that Ukraine desperately needs help."

Park district plans prescribed burns

The stewardship department of the Wood County Park District is planning to conduct prescribed fires in several park properties this spring.

The locations of these burns may include Bradner Preserve, Rudolph Savanna Area, Cricket Frog Cove and Sawyer Quarry Preserve.

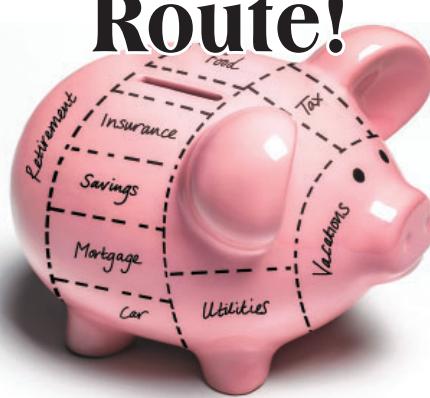

The timing of the fires will be determined by weather factors to ensure the most effective and safe conditions, including smoke mitigation.

All prescribed fire practices are conducted under waiver through the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, notification of the Ohio EPA, and direct supervision by an Ohio Certified Prescribed Fire Manager. Local fire departments for each site will be made aware of plans and will be directly notified at least 24 hours before the fire and also on the day of the fire.

For more information about prescribed fire practices, call Justin Siler, woodland specialist, at 419-466-3594 or email jsiler@wcparks.org.

Genzman to retire after long career in Oak Harbor

When Randy Genzman was just 15 years old, he began his career as a seasonal staff employee in the Oak Harbor wastewater treatment plant. Little did he know this would mark the start of a remarkable 30-year journey in public service, culminating in his role as the Village of Oak Harbor Administrator for the past decade.

As Genzman looks forward to his upcoming retirement on July 31, he reflects on the diverse experiences that have shaped his career.

His journey with the village and Ottawa County has taken him from the wastewater treatment plant to the village streets department, then to operations manager, overseeing both water and streets before being appointed as village administrator on Valentine's Day 2014.

"I've experienced the whole spectrum of the village, from sanitation to streets to water to operations to now village administrator. It's really been an honor to serve my community and I am grateful every day for this opportunity," he said.

As village administrator, Genzman said finds each day unique and welcomes the challenges it brings. While he may start the day in the office with a list of projects and priorities, a single phone call about an issue or concern can quickly shift his focus.

"It's a very multifaceted role. One minute, I could be dealing with a pothole on Oak Street, and then the next I'm leading a $12 million sewer replacement project on Church Street," he said. "The latter, of course, is a once-in-a-lifetime project. To see the impact it has made for residents and businesses is what that type of project is all about."

Those times may have made my day longer, but it was so worth it.

They genuinely felt better because I took the time to just sit and listen to them. That's all they wanted.

Genzman says the most rewarding aspect of his job has been the relationships he has built over the last 33 years. He recalls walking his meter route around town many years ago, where residents would invite him to sit and talk on their front porches or at picnic tables.

"Those times may have made my day longer, but it was so worth it. They genuinely felt better because I took the time to just sit and listen to them. That's all they wanted," he said.

Genzman also cherishes the friendships he has made with his colleagues over the years, remembering fondly those who are no longer with us, like Dick Meyer, Earl Graham, and Gary Harlow.

"Projects will always mean certain things to those of us who worked on them and had to deal with a failing system before we had a new system, but at the end of the day, it's the people and the relationships that matter most to me and ones that I will cherish forever," he said.

As the village begins the search for the next administrator, Genzman emphasizes the importance of listening and engaging with the community. He believes that listening to others is a crucial part of the role, as many times people just want someone to talk to, even if it's about an issue the village cannot directly address.

Engagement is also a critical component of the job, which involves connecting with residents, visitors and politicians, and understanding the Oak Harbor community.

"I'm part of a generational family who has been here since 1855. Oak Harbor is my home and the place where I not only grew up but raised my own children, and I'm excited for the community's next chapter. There are lots of strong initiatives and plans in place for the future," he said.

Oak Harbor Mayor Quinton Babcock expressed gratitude to Genzman for his contributions in positioning the village for the future and acknowledges that the next village administrator will have big shoes to fill.

"Wherever I go, people let me know how lucky we are to have Randy in Oak Harbor. It's going to be hard to measure up to him, but his successor will be lucky to stand on his shoulders," Babcock said. "We are so grateful that he gave his talents to the village for the last 30 years and I can't wait to see what mark he will leave on the community next."

As for Genzman's future plans, he and his wife, Monica, own Kozy Corners Restaurant, where he will be spending more time. With the spring and summer approaching, he also plans to spend more time outdoors and on his own projects. He said he has received several offers for new opportunities, but he's not ready to commit to anything just yet.

"I love the warmer weather, so August, September and hopefully into October, you'll see me outside and enjoying time with my family and friends. Then we'll see what comes next," he said.

Obituary

Obituary

Roger Newland

July 22, 1964 - February 20, 2024

Roger Newland passed away February 20, 2024. He passed peacefully at home with his loving wife by his side, after a long battle from cancer. He was the son of Alvin "Red" and Sharon Newland.

"Red", the only father he ever knew, taught him many trades that Roger used throughout his life. He enjoyed working with hand tools and was an excellent welder. If he wasn't at home working on a project you'd likely find him at someone else's house, helping them with one of theirs. He was the kind of man who would literally give you the shirt off his back. That's probably why you'd see him shirtless most of the time. He worked hard all his life. He played hard and loved even harder. He enjoyed life to the fullest.

He loved his family and his friends. He was the happiest just joking around and being silly. Even in his darkest days, he filled the room with laughter many times, which made him smile. He surely will be missed.

He was preceded in death by his parents and a son. He is survived by his wife, Dawn; siblings, Denise (David) Malkemus and Mark Newland; three biological children, three step children, eight step grandchildren, and one step great grandchild. He leaves behind many more relatives and some very special friends.

Per Roger's request, there will be no visitation or services at this time. There will be a Celebration of Life party either late spring or early summer.

it's reFUND time!

Thoughts on what is fair and what isn't

By Bryan Golden

"That's not fair," is a common childhood mantra. It's typically heard when a child doesn't get what he or she wants. Sometimes the sentiment is valid, more often it's not.

As we grow up, adults, whether it be parents or others, tend to intercede on our behalf to demonstrate fairness. The problem is we then develop a false expectation of fairness. This leads to great frustration as we mature since fairness in life is not guaranteed.

You've probably encountered many unfair circumstances. Invariably, you will encounter more. You can yell and scream, but you won't make life fair. Unplanned, unexpected, and even unfortunate circumstances do occur. It's not ideal, but that's the way it is.

Anger is a normal reaction when encountering unfair events. You may even feel bitter or resentful. These reactions, however, do not serve you well. They are counter-productive. Additionally, they are as destructive as poison to your mind and body.

Feeling victimized is another associated emotion. When you think something is unfair you may feel someone else is out to get you. When you take on the role of victim, you become reactive instead of proactive. This means you wait for what will come next rather than becoming a proactive participant. Victims are defensive. Those who refuse to act like a victim are offensive.

On the other hand, determination is good. When something is unfair, you have a chance to make the best of it. You can choose to use a bad situation as a stepping stone to something better. You can't control your environment but you do decide how to respond to it.

When faced with the unfair, you have to decide where you want to go from there. In order to make the best of a situation, consider all of your options with an open mind. Harboring resentment impairs your judgment. You are then more likely to react emotionally instead of logically. The goal is to make your situation better, not worse.

Julie had applied for an open position in her company. She was evidently qualified and consistently received excellent performance reviews. Julie was optimistic about her chances. She really wanted the promotion. To Julie's dismay, Cathy, a friend of her boss, was hired for the job. Julie felt it wasn't fair. Cathy didn't have nearly as much experience as her.

What were Julie's options? She could go to work each day filled with bitterness, determined to get even. She didn't have to perform at such a high level. Julie could do just enough to get by. Why should she work so hard only to be treated unfairly?

The second option was for Julie to accept that such things happen. As a well-regarded employee, other opportunities would emerge. If Julie wasn't happy with the growth path at her company, she could get another job elsewhere.

If Julie picked the first option, she would only be hurting herself. As her productivity dropped, her reviews would suffer along with her chances for a promotion. Should Julie then look for another job, she certainly wouldn't get any glowing references.

The second option is much more beneficial to Julie's future. Regardless of whether she looks for a new job or not, Julie would not be acting in a self-destructive manner.

Regardless of what unfair situations you face, you have a chance to improve your situation. Understand what sequence of events lead you to your current circumstances. It may not always make sense, but that doesn't matter. What's important is optimizing your chances to make the best of it.

Asking Taylor Swift to park the private jet

By Chuck Collins

I spent a decade, like many parents, chauffeuring pre-teen and teenage girls around to a Taylor Swift soundtrack. I learned every Swift song as it was released and sang along to the chorus in the car. I even went to one of her first stadium concerts with my young Swifties.

Congrats, Taylor, for your talent and decades of consistently great songwriting. You deserve all the accolades and rewards. Here's my one request: Give up your private jet.

Those young fans of yours that I used to shuttle around are now campaigning against climate change. They understand this is the critical decade to shift our trajectory away from fossil fuels and towards clean energy.

And they need you, once again, to sing a new song.

I know you're dealing with a lot of crazy conspiracy theories in right-wing media. In their zeal to denounce you, you even succeeded in getting Fox News to admit that private jet travel contributes to climate change, which is no small feat!

They've said a lot of nonsense about you, but that part is true. Private jets emit 10 to 20 times more pollutants per passenger than commercial jets. You know it's wrong — that's why you cover your face with an umbrella when you're disembarking.

Maybe it's even why you've decided to sell one of your jets. Why not the other?

We all have that experience of wishing we could be two places at once. I've been on a work trip and wished I could zip home for my daughter's soccer game. But your private flight from your tour in Tokyo to the Super Bowl burned more carbon than six entire average U.S. households will all year.

Like so many challenges in our country, private jet pollution is increasing alongside inequality. According to a report I co-authored for the Institute for Policy Studies, High Flyers 2023, the number of private jets has grown 133 percent over the last two decades. And just 1 percent of flyers now contribute half of all carbon emissions from aviation.

Should we set off a carbon bomb so the ultra-rich can fly to their vacation destinations? More and more Americans are answering no. In Massachusetts, a grassroots coalition called Stop Private Jet Expansion at Hanscom and Everywhere is calling on the governor to reject an airport expansion that would serve private jets. It could inspire similar fights nationally.

Banning or restricting private jet travel would be one of the easiest paths to reducing emissions if it weren't a luxury consumed by the most wealthy and powerful people on the planet. But climate advocates are still working to find a way. In Congress, Senator Ed Markey and Rep. Nydia Velazquez have proposed hiking the tax on private jet fuel to make sure private jet users pay the real financial and ecological costs of their luxury travel.

There's good news, Taylor: A generation of music stars toured without jets, taking the proverbial tour bus. And it sparked a lot of great songs about this amazing land.

Taylor, if you want to be green, stay on the ground. Your fans will love you and the future generations will thank you.

I believe there's a song there.

Chuck Collins directs the Program on Inequality and co-edits the Inequality.org website at the Institute for Policy Studies. This op-ed was adapted from an earlier version at CommonDreams.org and distributed for syndication by OtherWords.org.

Lessons learned from forgiving student loans

By Thomas Knapp

The Biden administration recently announced a new $1.2 billion round of student loan forgiveness, with President Joe Biden personally notifying the 153,000 beneficiaries by email.

"I hope this relief gives you a little more breathing room," Biden wrote. "I've heard from countless people who have told me that relieving the burden of their student loan debt will allow them to support themselves and their families, buy their first home, start a small business, and move forward with life plans they've put on hold."

Coming atop more than 3.9 million previous recipients, that 153,000 may not seem like a lot, but let's consider two other numbers.

In the 2016 presidential election, Donald Trump beat Hillary Clinton with 304 electoral votes to her 227 — but by a total of less than 80,000 individual votes in three very close states (Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin).

In 2020, Biden coasted into office by beating Trump 306-232 in the Electoral College. As in 2016, though, three key states (Arizona, Georgia, and Wisconsin) delivered that victory by a razor-thin popular vote margin of less than 45,000.

Biden's hoping for "breathing room,"

“I hope this relief gives you a little more breathing room.”

all right — but more for himself and his party than for those student borrowers.

Borrowers aren't unimportant, of course. But Biden isn't really looking at 153,000 borrowers. He's looking at 153,000 voters.

Plus a previous 3.9 million.

Plus all of those voters' parents, spouses, children, and other loved ones who probably like the reduced monthly hit on their household incomes.

Like previous rounds, this latest write-off is a $1.2 billion campaign expenditure, one that doesn't have to come out of the Biden campaign's $56 million in cash reserves, or be raised with donation drives.

Those of us who don't have student loan balances hanging over our heads might not like it that much, but we probably won't remember on the 5th of November quite as bitterly as the beneficiaries will fondly.

And before we get temporarily outraged, it's probably worth considering how OUR votes are bought.

They're bought with "stimulus" checks.

They're bought with farm subsidies.

They're bought with government paychecks (including at second hand through contractors in industries ranging from "defense" to "infrastructure" and beyond).

They're bought with newly created, or increased, "benefit" payouts of all kinds.

We're all of us getting bribed, all the time — with our own money and with money from other Americans.

We're supposed to remember the bribes we get, forget the bribes others got, and vote accordingly.

And we probably will.

Thus endeth the lesson.

PAC flyers are misleading

To the editor: At the heart of the Ohio Republican primary election in the 75th House of Representatives District is who selects their representative: special interests or the people?

A flurry of flyers in your mailbox from dark money, out-of-state organizations — trying to appear like they are grass roots — are spreading deceit about our conservative champion, Rep. Haraz Ghanbari.

The dark money groups invite you to use their scorecard so you know which lawmakers and candidates are "principled" enough to deserve your support. After a brief Facebook interaction with a prominent group's contact office, I found their tactics controlling and manipulative. Legislature voting records are readily available without the dogmatic slant and shell name of a "conservative" PAC.

Voters must look at facts and not generalized statements on campaign flyers sponsored by a PAC. These organizations care nothing about the real grassroots system built over decades by the county parties to ensure a steady flow of quality leadership. Their intrusion in the Republican primary is a wolf in sheep's clothing.

The newcomers they sponsor on the primary ballot have little to no civic experience other than to make generic statements, using buzzwords like "economic opportunity, limited government, and affordable energy." To even try and compare these candidates with the achievements of Rep. Ghanbari is almost laughable. Rep. Ghanbari works hands-on daily in Wood County. He is willing to work with any level of government and address any citizen's concerns.

Romance at Forest Park

To the editor: I recall going to the Forest Park as a youngster, particularly riding the dodgem cars.

But my fondest memory is meeting my future wife there.

In 1943 or 44, I was with a classmate at Harris-Elmore and we were "cruising" and stopped at the park. We went in and the roller skating was in progress. One of the skaters was a relative of my friend and he introduced me to Anita Deno, who was from Woodville and was a very good skater.

About four years later she became my wife.

We had a few dates after the Forest Park introduction but then drifted apart until I returned home from World War II. In December, 1946, a friend of mine arranged a date with Anita and I and we went to Rainbow Gardens in Fremont to dance.

Our romance continued and we were married in 1948.

The tubes protected 5,000 small trees when they were first planted and now need to be removed to allow the trees to flourish.

The trees were planted into 18-acres of restored wetland on the Carter Historic Farm property with funding through a grant with the Black Swamp Conservancy. The work involves stacking, bending, and lifting 5-15 pounds on uneven ground.

Totality on Tap

To kick off eclipse celebrations, Imagination Station Toledo will present BrewClipse 2024, a craft beer tasting with a celestial twist, Saturday, April 6 from 6-10 p.m.

The event will highlight over a dozen total eclipse beers specially crafted by local breweries participating in the 419 Ale Trail.

In addition to sampling all the local solar brews, visitors can watch what it takes to create a new brew during The Science of Beer workshop, hosted by the Glass City Mashers and the Lourdes University-Craft Beverage Program. Then, explore the science center, enjoy a Solar System Experience and see the latest traveling exhibit, "Above and Beyond."

Tickets to The Total BrewClipse 2024 are $35 in advance and $45 at the door. The Science of Beer workshop is a $15 add-on. Tickets are available online at imaginationstationtoledo.org.

'The Tuskegee Airmen and The Great Lakes'

The National Museum of the Great Lakes is hosting a micro exhibit titled, "Taking Flight: The Tuskegee Airmen and The Great Lakes," on display through March 31.

The exhibit examines the Great Lakes connection to the famed Tuskegee Airmen, an elite group of African American military pilots and airmen who fought in World War II.

"During World War II, with a segregated military, African American men were sent to the Tuskegee Institute in Tuskegee, Alabama to train for working in, on, and around airplanes," said Carrie Sowden, the museum's Archaeological and Research Director, who developed the micro exhibit and is also a part of the archaeological team studying the Tuskegee aircraft recently discovered at the bottom of Lake Huron. "Held to a much higher standard to enter the military's aviation program, African American men graduating from Tuskegee were some of the smartest and most fit pilots of their time."

The exhibit uses images and words to tell visitors the story of the Great Lakes connection to the famed Tuskegee Airmen. It examines the elite men trained in the program and focuses particularly on the tragic story of Lt. Frank Moody, who lost his life on a training mission over Lake Huron on April 11, 1944.

For more information on the exhibit, museum hours and ticket pricing visit nmgl.org.

Black Swamp Players to present 'War Paint'

The Black Swamp Players will present "War Paint," a mesmerizing musical that tells the story of legendary 20th-century businesswomen Elizabeth Arden and Helena Rubinstein.

The production, which features music by Scott Frankel, lyrics by Michael Korie and book by Doug Wright, will be staged Fridays and Saturdays March 15, 16, 22 and 23 at 8 p.m. and Sundays March 17 and 24 at 2 p.m. at 115 E. Oak St., Bowling Green.

Tickets are $25, general admission. For ticket information and reservations, visit www.tinyurl.com/BSPSeason.

42nd Street

Fremont Community Theatre will present their latest production, "42nd Street," offering a new twist on the timeless classic.

Under the direction of Pamela Meggitt, assisted by Randy and Darla Brown, the production will be staged April 26-28 and May 3-5.

Single tickets range from $10-$18. For more information, visit fremontcommunitytheatre.org or call 419-332-0695.

TourismOhio launches 2024 solar eclipse trip planning feature

With the 2024 Total Solar Eclipse quickly approaching, TourismOhio has launched an updated Total Solar Eclipse map to make planning for the event in Ohio easier.

The April 8 event will plunge parts of Ohio into total darkness for nearly 5 minutes as the moon passes between the sun and Earth. Several cities, including Dayton, Lima, Toledo, Findlay, Cleveland, and Akron, are in the path of totality. In total, 55 Ohio counties will experience at least a partial eclipse.

"From state agencies to our local partners, there are many Ohioans working together to ensure that visitors and residents have a safe and enjoyable experience in the Heart of it All," said Lydia Mihalik, director of the Department of Development, which oversees the TourismOhio office. "With all there is to experience in Ohio, you can create an unforgettable weekend filled with memories your family will be talking about for years to come."

The interactive Total Solar Eclipse Map on Ohio.org helps visitors plan their trip to Ohio with places to watch the eclipse and an interactive list of viewing parties, festivals, and other events happening across the state.

The Total Solar Eclipse landing page also includes other ideas to create an out-of-this-world itinerary perfect for a long weekend—travelers can also go 'to the moon and back' along the Ohio Lunar Road Trip or gaze up at the stars with the best spots in the state, and explore Ohio's top-rated science museums with their families.

Visitors are encouraged to share their Ohio total solar eclipse memories and adventures on social media with #OhioTheHeartofItAll and #Eclipse2024.

State nature preserves are Ohio's hidden gems, natural treasures

Ohio may not be blessed with vast wilderness acreage but what it does have is an extensive network of state parks, preserves, regional park systems, municipal parks and conservancy lands that is the envy of the nation.

It's common for those who visit or relocate to Ohio to be surprised at the beauty and variety of natural areas to visit and enjoy.

So many great places that it's a good bet most Ohioans don't even know the extent of choices available. It's a fact that some of the best natural places in Ohio just aren't very well known.

It's not that people are trying to keep them secret. It's just that they exist in relative obscurity. They're not frontline destinations like our biggest state parks. They're not fodder for the tourism bureaus to feature. Some of them don't have many amenities, or they're in remote locations, or maybe they just don't get the attention they deserve.

Some of Ohio's best gems are to be found in the long list of state nature preserves. You'll find some on roads seldom traveled. Others are surrounded by a bigger better-known place, like Mohican State Park, Hocking Hills, or Hueston Woods.

They range in size from an acres to hundreds of acres.

There are 146 state-listed preserves in Ohio, four of them in Lucas County. Irwin Prairie, Campbell Prairie and Kitty Todd Preserve were joined early this year by one of the state's newest designated preserves, Blue Creek Limestone Glade, which is surrounded by Blue Creek Metropark.

Just a short drive away for us is Goll Woods, a premier natural area noted for its old growth forest and spring wildflowers. You'll find that 312-acre preserve northwest of Archbold, not far from another popular Northwest Ohio attraction, Sauder Village.

Holden Arboretum, located east of Cleveland in Geauga County, is well-known for the beauty and quality of its formal collections. The big surprise might just be the special natural areas it also counts in its holdings.

Count Stebbins Gulch as a natural treasure that's one of our state's biggest secrets. Holden Arboretum calls it the crown jewel of their extensive natural area holdings, which also include Little Mountain.

The Ohio History Connection – you might remember it as the Ohio Historical Society – has its own share of natural treasures, a diversion from the commonly held notion that OHC is all about human history. Among its many facilities is Cedar Bog Nature Preserve near Springfield, which is a bona fide natural treasure. OHC calls it "the largest and best example of a boreal and prairie fen complex in Ohio." And they're right. Especially good is timing a visit to enjoy the splendor of the showy lady's-slipper orchids in bloom.

The Cleveland Museum of Natural History, in an effort spearheaded by botanist Jim Bissell, has been instrumental in acquiring key natural areas in northeast Ohio all the way over to significant sites on the Lake Erie Islands. Count among them such diverse areas as Grand River Terraces, Cathedral Woods, Morgan Swamp and Cuyahoga Wetlands among the sites their work has contributed to preservation.

Arguably the best and best-known state preserve is Conkles Hollow in the Hocking Hills. The rugged, rocky gorge with outstanding scenic features is a very popular destination.

For a complete list of state preserves as well as information on the state scenic rivers and Ohio's rare plants, visit natrepreserves.ohiodnr.gov.

Turnaround in full swing for Kate Achter at UDM

By Yaneek Smith
Press Sports Editor
sports@presspublications.com

When Kate Achter took over the girls basketball program at the University of Detroit Mercy, the Titans had won 11 games in the previous five seasons, reaching a low of 1-29 in 2022.

In Achter's first year as the coach, UDM went 5-25, including a 3-17 mark in the Horizon League, but things have drastically changed for the better this season.

The Titans are currently 15-14 and 8-10 in the conference and are trying to make a push in the stretch run as the league tournament awaits.

Achter, a 2004 Clay alum, is known for her stellar basketball career with the Eagles and then at Bowling Green State University, which ended in 2008.

Now she's living close to home and rebuilding a program while balancing her life as a mother and wife.

"Well, I would love to say it's the job we're doing (as coaches). We were hired to change a program. We won more games this season than I think in the last seven seasons combined," Achter said. "The style of basketball that we play fits in our league. We've been able to develop our players in the program and supplement them with recruiting."

"I think the program turnaround is one of the best in the country. I think people assume how easy it is to win games; it's why people get jobs and lose jobs so quickly. I can't undersell enough how much work we've put in, the staff, the players and their investments. It's been a very hard two-year journey, but it's been fruitful."

Achter talked about her offensive and defensive philosophies.

"We run a combination of a motion, ball-screen offense. The brand draws two defenders, and we teach the kids to make the read. Attacking the basket or a post touch inside commands a double team, and you have to make a read out of it," she said. "We've been doing a good job of it so far."

"The defense is all man-to-man. We do a little bit of pressing, a 2-2-1 press, run-and-jump press. It's full man-to-man," she said.

The starting lineup consists of 5-6 point guard Paris Gilmore, who is backed up by 5-5 point guard Myrna Hooper. Amaya Burch, who is 5-9, and Imani McNeal, who is 5-8, are the wings, and the 6-0 Irene Murua and the 6-1 Emma Trawally-Porta are the forwards.

The six players average between 6.0 points and 10.7 points.

Murua leads the team with an average of 10.7 points and 7.2 rebounds, Trawally-Porta puts up 9.6 points and 7.7 rebounds, McNeal is averaging 7.7 points, followed by Burch (7.4 ppg), Hooper (6.8 ppg) and Gilmore (6.0 ppg). Annika Corcoran, who has played in five games this season, has averaged 7.8 points. Jada Moorehead is averaging 4.7 points and Makayla Jackson is putting up 3.4 points per game.

The Titans play their games at Calihan Hall, which seats just over 7,900 people. It is named after Bob Calihan, who went on to become the school's winningest coach. Thirteen years ago, the court was named Dick Vitale Court in honor of the ESPN analyst, who coached the boys team at UDM starting in 1973, and later served as the school's athletic director.

Before coming to UDM, a Jesuit university that is home to over 5,000 students, Achter was the coach at Loyola Chicago, rebuilding the program there in six seasons. She was also an assistant coach at Xavier and St. Bonaventure before that.

In her coaching career, Achter has seen student-athletes receive 21 all-conference selections, one Freshman of the Year and one Sixth Women of the Year accolades.

After graduating from BGSU, Achter played a year of professional basketball in Greece before returning to the U.S. and working as a graduate assistant with the Falcons. She is in the BGSU Hall of Fame.

A four year starter, she was a part of a senior class in '08 that went a combined 108-23 during their tenure at BG, while also going 57-7 in the MAC. Their remarkable team success included a historic run to the Sweet Sixteen of the NCAA Tournament. That 2006-07 team won 31 games, which set school and MAC records for victories in a season. Achter was the MAC Player of the Year as a senior in '08 and first-team all-MAC, after earning second team all-MAC the previous two seasons. She also was named to the MAC All-Tournament Team three times in her four years, including in 2005, when she earned MAC Tournament MVP honors.

Achter played for Curt Miller, who is now the coach of the Los Angeles Sparks.

She talked about the demands of being a coach.

"This situation has been the best since I was at St. Bonaventure. One of the reasons I like working here is because of the freedom — I know what is most important and deserves my time. Sometimes you have to take an 11 p.m. phone call from a recruit on the West Coast," she said. "I'm spending more time with someone else's children than my own (during the season).

"My wife, Tina, gets it, she can relate to the time and knows I'm not skipping out because I want to skip out," she said. The couple has two kids, Reese, who is 4, and Archie, who is 2.

As one might expect, Achter is very happy to be closer to her friends and family. Oregon is just 70 miles south of Detroit.

"I'm enjoying myself a lot — the move has been great for our family. I'm close to home for the first time in my career," she said. "I've been able to have family at our games. The administration's support has been amazing. Detroit wants winners."

Achter was a student-athlete at one time and knows how demanding it can be.

"It's legitimately a full-time job and then some if you want to be a really good player. People think it's just class, traveling and games. Yes, that is true, but you have to take time taking care of your body, working on basketball maintenance, putting the extra work in, watching film, going to study tables," she said. "It can take 12 hours out of the day. Some people are better at balancing that than others."

One of Achter's assistants is Oak Harbor legend Andrea Cecil, who also played at BG before finishing up at Florida Gulf Coast University.

Cecil works with Trawally-Porta, Murua, Moorehead and Latifah Amzil. She was previously the director of basketball operations but is now an assistant coach.

"Her responsibilities changed a little bit with her promotion," Achter said of Cecil. "She's a great basketball mind; she's local, and I had familiarity with her. She mentors (four players), does all the things like scouting and recruiting visits on campus. It's a little different than what she was doing a year ago."

Achter's sisters are Susan and Jessica, and her brother is Ross. Roger, her father, coached her at Clay, and Marianne is her mother. Her cousins, A.J. and Austin, are well known for their athletic prowess as well.

"My father is very driven; my mother is as well. I think when you grow up in an environment where people are driven to be very good at their profession, it leads you to be driven. I'm one of four kids, so fighting and competing for the best dinner roll was a sport," Achter said. "We played together outside and everything was a competition. I don't think you get to teach those things."

"I'm lucky to have a really supportive home life — close to my aunts, uncles and cousins," she said. "It's led us to find success in our personal adult lives. I've been very lucky and fortunate enough to have a family that supports me."

Local coaching assistant mentoring players in three sports

By Yaneek Smith
Press Sports Editor
sports@presspublications.com

Eric Dusseau is Oak Harbor personified.

The 2004 Oak Harbor graduate, who earned 10 letters playing football, basketball and baseball as a student, is working at the school as an assistant coach of those same three teams. He's overseen successes within all three sports and is busy working to help those teams accomplish loftier goals.

He has the respect of the coaches he works with, and the experience and credibility when it comes to working with the players.

Head football coach, Mike May, who has led the program for 16 years, has had Dusseau with him for over a decade and has seen his assistant coach grow into accepting larger roles with the team. Dusseau is the quarterbacks coach and coaches the defensive line.

"He always has the defensive line playing hard and they take great pride in that. During practice, they sprint from drill to drill and always give tremendous effort," said May. "On the offensive side of the ball, Eric is heavily involved with weekly game planning and also works with (offensive coordinator) Scott Schulte on play calling duties on Friday nights.

"When Eric first started with us, he was a position coach who possessed a great knowledge of the game. Over the years, he has taken on more responsibility, which has helped us as a program. He does a great job of staying on an even keel on game days and remains steady in pressure situations. That approach definitely helps our quarterbacks stay calm regardless of the situation we may be in."

In the last six seasons, the Rockets have won four league titles, one regional championship and advanced as far as the regional semifinals three times. And they'll bring a number of key players back next fall.

Dusseau also coaches basketball with Eric Sweet, who has rebuilt a program that had fallen on hard times when he took over.

Dusseau coached basketball at the junior high for three years and is now in his sixth season as an assistant with Sweet.

"Coach Dusseau is my varsity assistant and is my right-hand man when it comes to my varsity team. He is directly in charge of subbing but has roles in game planning, game management, scouting reports and daily practice roles," said Sweet. "In basketball, you have to be involved in a little bit of everything, but during the game he does manage the subbing pattern and helps out play calling when he has an itch that something will work."

"He has grown as a coach and I have also grown as a coach with him on my staff. He brings a different style of coaching and knowledge than I do and we have grown together over the years and have enjoyed every minute of it."

Under Sweet's tenure, the Rockets won their first league title in 19 years and the first sectional title in 19 years. Now, Oak Harbor is a bonafide competitor in the Northern Buckeye Conference and was competitive before that in the Sandusky Bay Conference Bay Division.

Sweet knows how much it matters to a local resident like Dusseau to be part of the program.

"I think it is a great honor that all coaches in the three sports want and need Eric to be a part of their program. I think he views it as a huge honor but also views it as giving back to the school that he loves. He was born and raised in this area, played in high school and is now able to give back and help mold and create the next generation of Rockets," said Sweet. "I am proud to coach in Oak Harbor and be a part of the programs, but that is a different pride and honor when you come from the system. When we are in big moments, often Coach Duss will step up with a story from a different time ago of Oak Harbor. He has great pride in Oak Harbor."

Nick Lance oversees a good baseball program, and he's had Dusseau as an assistant for eight years. Dusseau coaches the JV team and assists with outfielders in the program.

"Each year, he continues to help develop our young JV players, which helps to provide us at the varsity level with quality players," Lance said. "More so, he's just a positive role model for our kids and holds them accountable to the standards of the program."

"Eric is the epitome of what it means to be a Rocket. He plays a vital role in each of the programs he's a part of. It's apparent that he wants his high school to be the best it can whether it be athletically and/or academically."

May summed up just what Dusseau means to the school district and the community.

"Eric loves Oak Harbor as much as anyone that I have ever known. Since the very first day of coaching football here, he has been willing to do anything to help the program," said May. "Eric has coached the JV offense for many years, which has helped our kids develop their skills in preparation to be varsity players. It is rare these days to have someone who teaches full time and is willing to invest the time to coach three sports. We are very fortunate to have Eric here at Oak Harbor. He has a tremendous impact on our kids, school and community."

ODNR to release rainbow trout in several Ohio lakes

The Ohio Department of Natural Resources (ODNR) Division of Wildlife will release 85,000 rainbow trout across the state beginning Wednesday, March 13. The 95 stocking locations were chosen to give as many anglers as possible a chance to reel in these feisty fish in March, April, and May. Trout releases are designed for high angler success and harvest.

Find a complete list of release dates and locations at ohiodnr.gov/trout-stockings. Fishing techniques can be found at wildohio.gov.

Information about the trout releases, including a complete list of dates, stocking locations, event information, and any changes to the schedule because of weather is available at wildohio.gov or by calling 1-800-WILDLIFE (1-800-945-3543).

Some trout stocking locations feature a special event on the day of the scheduled release, including youth-only fishing. Fishing at state park youth ponds is only available for youth 16 years of age and younger for the first seven days after trout are released. After that week, these waters are open to anglers of all ages through the end of April. On May 1, these ponds return to providing youth-only fishing for the rest of the year.

Where to fish

Rainbow trout are stocked throughout Ohio. A few of the most popular local fishing locations include:

Northwest Ohio: East Harbor State Park Pond, Giertz Lake, Maumee Bay State Park Nature Center Pond, Olander Lake, Pearson Metropark Ponds and Sleepy Hollow Park Pond.

By stocking these and other water areas across the state, the Division of Wildlife provides anglers the opportunity to enjoy quality spring rainbow trout fishing in a family-friendly environment. The daily limit is five rainbow trout per angler.

Rainbow trout are raised at Ohio's cold water state fish hatcheries and measure between 10-13 inches when they are released by the Division of Wildlife. Rainbow trout are stocked primarily near metropolitan areas in order to provide close-to-home fishing opportunities for many anglers. Trout are sensitive to warm temperatures and typically do not survive through late spring so the best time to catch them is within two weeks of release.

Anglers ages 16 and older are required to have an Ohio fishing license to fish in state public waters. An annual license is $25 and is valid for one year after purchase.

ODNR will release 85,000 rainbow trout across the state. Trout releases are designed for high angler success and harvest. (ODNR photo)

A one-day fishing license costs $14 and may be redeemed for credit toward the purchase of a one-year fishing license. Licenses and permits can be purchased online at wildohio.gov, through the HuntFish OH app and at participating license sales agents.

Sales of fishing licenses, along with the federal Sport Fish Restoration program, support the operation of Division of Wildlife fish hatcheries. The Sport Fish Restoration program is a partnership among federal and state governments, the fishing industry, anglers and boaters. When anglers purchase rods, reels, fishing tackle, fish finders and motorboat fuel, they pay an excise tax. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service administers and disburses funds from these taxes to state fish and wildlife agencies. These funds are used to acquire habitat, produce and stock fish, conduct research and assessment surveys, provide aquatic education and secure fishing access.

The mission of the Division of Wildlife is to conserve and improve fish and wildlife resources and their habitats for sustainable use and appreciation by all. Visit wildohio.gov to find out more.

ODNR ensures a balance between wise use and protection of natural resources for the benefit of all. Visit the ODNR website at ohiodnr.gov for more information.
